REPORTED INDIAN MASSACRE

A report is current that a large number of persons have been massacred somewhere in the Wind River country among them Hank Leonhman, a packer well known at Walla Walla

A WOOLEN MILL

A movement is now on foot which looks as though we are to have a woolen mill without fail Three prominent gentlemen have already taken $45 000 in stock, and other parties have signified their intention to take stock to an amount that makes the whole subscription foot up $60 000 It is desired to have stock taken to the amount of $75 000 when operations will be at once commenced

THE LEWIS MINES.

Among those who have returned is Mr J C. Isaacs in whose statements the public will place great reliance Up to the time Mr I left the discovery was confined to a single creek, although just as he was about to leave a report reached him that gold had been found on another stream, also a tributary of the Salmon Mr I estimates that the diggings already discovered will afford profitable employment for two thousand men There is a large extent of country, evidently gold bearing, which is yet to be prospected, and should attempts be realized the mining district will be equal in extent to the Boise Basin, to which it bears a marked resemblance These new mines are distant from Fast Bannock about forty miles, from which they are separated by a rugged chain of mountains. Lemhi Valley at an early day was occupied by the Mormons, who had once a flourishing settlement there, but were compelled to abandon it on account of Indian hostilities It is thought that several hundred persons will winter in the new mines, provisions for them can be introduced from East Bannock at reasonable rates. Mr I exhibited to us a lot of Lemhi dust, much of it was coarse, it is estimated to be worth $17 per ounce

THE ILL-FATED EVENING STAR.—The steamer had an unusual large list of passengers The N. Y. Herald, October 10th says

Among the passengers on board the ill fated vessel was the opera troupe of Paul Albanis, comprising 59 singers artistes and musicians, whom the managers had engaged in Paris Mr Albanis and his company reached this city on Thursday, the 27th ult, by the steamer Ville de Paris

During the passage from Europe, Paul Albanis, the manager, was strongly advised to convey his artistes to New Orleans by rail, but fearing the voyage would prove too fatiguing for the ladies of the troupe, he decided upon sending them passage by the Evening Star He did not, however, secure his own berth on board, but proceeded to New Orleans by land, thus avoiding the sad fate that awaited the members of his company While in Paris Mr Albanis received the news of his father's death, and lost a brother two weeks later His second brother, Charles Albanis, was one of the passengers by the Evening Star

Dr Spaulding's circus Company, numbering about 30 persons, were also on board The organization had on the vessel a quantity of paraphernalia and baggage, but no horses.

Ninety seven young girls, whose ages varied from 15 to 22 were among the unfortunates. These had been engaged by the matrons of sundry New Orleans maisons de jose to take apartments in their respective establishments for the winter. The matrons who had come to New York about a month since for the purpose of making a selection among the many inmates of the fashionable metropolitan houses, were Bianca Robbins, Jennie King, Flora Bedell, Susan Kingsley, Pauline Mead and Josephine Hannan, all well known in the circles of the southern demi monde With the exception of Flora Bedell, who proceeded to New Orleans by rail, all were passengers on board the Evening Star As to the real names of the poor girls who accompanied them, but little information could be gathered From the earliest days of their entrance upon their career of sorrow, they had cast them aside, and substituted in their stead the inevitable *n

The Daily Oregonian.

SATURDAY MORNING, NOV. 17, 1866.

An Inventor Wanted.

If somebody could invent a patent for the Copperhead style of argument, so adapted as to make it answer the practical purposes of life, and pass current among men who reason from cause to effect and from effect back to cause, that somebody would soon be literally overwhelmed with the immensity of the demand for the patented article. No patent ever did or ever will sell with such remunerative figures to the patentee as would such a patent. It would work such marvellous changes in the world of results as would astonish even the inventor himself; and an inventor is supposed never to be astonished at anything except the wilful and malicious inability of the public to see the virtues of his machine.

For instance: Fact says that some seven or eight of the Southern States had passed their ordinances of secession while Mr. Buchanan was still President of the United States, that is to say, before the 4th of March, 1861, when Mr. Lincoln took his seat. Fact further says that those States were in process of segregation into a Southern Confederacy. Fact says that the first act of war was committed by the people of the South. Fact having said so much, Copperhead steps in with his patentable machine and shows conclusively that the responsibility of the war rests with Mr. Lincoln and the Union party. This is a result which logic and reason could never have worked out though they had spent the full term of "the eternal years" at the problem; but the Copperhead machine grinds it out for you with a turn and is momently ready for the next job.

Another instance, involving the same principles and which shows the immense success of the machine: Fact says Smith is a clothing merchant who is in the habit of hanging coats and pants, etc., outside of his door. Fact says Seedy Brown comes along and appropriates said articles to his own use and is thereupon put on trial for a felony. Fact says that the law pronounces such an act a felony and the jury is about to find him guilty. Copperhead sees an opening for proving his machine to be all he claims for it; he steps into court, gives the crank a turn and out comes the verdict: "Brown innocent as a lamb; Smith guilty of a felony."

People who are ever curious may like to know how that conclusion was reached from such premises. Easy enough: Brown was constitutionally a thief, but that amounted to nothing so long as there might be nothing for him to steal. Smith placed the articles in his way. Brown was tempted and fell. If Smith had not done as he did, Brown wouldn't have done as he did. Therefore Smith is the felon and Brown the injured party. The sentence must be that as Brown has been aggrieved he must be conciliated and adequate atonement must be made. The machine adjudges that Brown shall be placed in possession of Smith's stock of goods to have and to hold the same, etc., and Smith goes up for life.

That is how Copperhead patentable argument works and all that is wanted to make the machine a success, is an attachment which will prevent the destruction of established rules of law, logic, common sense, etc., upon which the world has depended so long that they have become rather chronic habits. An inventor is wanted; no loyal man need apply.

Labor Wanted.

Labor is capital. To increase our wealth we need a large accession to our laboring force. There is wealth yet untouched, in every rood of land in the habitable parts of Oregon. There is wealth in the forests, in the mountains, in the waters, which the hand of labor can easily make its own. The labor of each individual increases the wealth of the community and of the State. Labor, however it may be directed, will always create something which possesses a value. The great secret of wealth is production. Therefore our chief need is the augmentation of our producing force. The branches of industry which labor would at once establish here, had we labor in abundance, are endless. New enterprises would at once be sought out, and the activities of the people would turn into a thousand channels now unthought of, or thought of only as future possibilities. There is room for labor on every hand. Men must strike boldly without waiting for others to take the lead. We shall no doubt often hear it said that there is not employment here for the labor we have, and that work is not always to be found by those now here who seek it. But willing hands in this country need not be idle. All cannot find employment in the towns, but the whole country is before those who are willing to lay hold of an occupation and work themselves into position and wealth and influence and usefulness. Transient labor, desultory effort, is not what the country wants. It has need of those who are willing to work, and who expect to remain in the State,—whose sole object is not to obtain means to carry them away, but who intend to pass their lives here and grow up with the general prosperity, who have an interest in the public welfare and feel a concern in the progress, good order and permanency of society. Such labor as this Oregon needs, and of such as this there is no danger that she will ever have too much.

STILL IN MOURNING.—Though the Southern people profess to accept the situation, they find it difficult to reconcile themselves to the loss of their darling institution, slavery. The Richmond Times pours out this flood of lamentations:

"The great fact will yet stare the world appallingly in the face, that there is no system and no labor which can give commerce its great staples like that which our forefathers founded, and which were preserved until blind folly and fanaticism severed the arteries of our prosperity and cut the jugular vein of national wealth. When too late to redeem their errors, the authors of our and the nation's calamities will repent in sackcloth and ashes."

It is truly a melancholy spectacle to see those who were once accustomed to luxury and ease purchased by unrequited toil, brooding over the loss they have suffered, and lamenting the cruel fate which no longer permits them to rob other men of their earnings and appropriate the same to their own use and profit. And these late slave masters will probably spend the remainder of their lives repining over their fallen fortunes, and never undertake to help themselves out of the calamity which they so piteously deplore. They will forever hold the belief that it is easier to live by others' labor than by their own.

The rebel General Humphreys, Governor of Mississippi, sent a message to the rebel Legislature of his State on the 16th of October, in reference to the constitutional amendment, in which he said: "This amendment adopted by a Congress of less than three fourths of the States of the Union, in palpable violation of the rights of more than one-fourth of the States, is such an insulting outrage and denial of the equal rights of so many of our worthiest citizens, who have shed lustre and glory upon our section and our race, both in the forum and in the field, such a gross usurpation of the rights of the State, and such a centralization of power in the Federal Government, that I presume a mere reading of it will cause its rejection by you." Of course "General" Humphreys would not favor a measure which when adopted will exclude him from office and set a mark of perpetual disgrace upon him.

The Tribune asks the following question: Does the right to make laws for the people of the United States, reside in a Congress elected by the ballot, or in a President elected by a ballot.

OF COURSE.—The Yreka Union, (copperhead) don't like General Sheridan. Here is the way he talks of him:

Sheridan, although a willing horse in party harness, he is too trifling to build upon. An accidental conqueror, and in the excitement exalted to a high position he has more fully exposed his incapacity by a failure in every effort and position, until he has sunk from view, leaving nothing but the glitter of the tinsel of his shoulder straps discernible.

Now if Sheridan had upheld the Louisiana rebels in murdering loyal men, this copperhead would never have expectorated this abuse and these falsehoods. But Sheridan, like a true man, endeavored to protect the loyalists in his military district from rebel assassins,—hence neither rebels nor copperheads can endure him. His offence hath this extent, no more. But they will never pardon him for interposing to save the lives of loyal men.

VERY DESIRABLE.—The Bulletin, in speaking of the appointment of J. W. Simonton as General Agent of the New York Associated Press, says:

It is understood that for several years past much matter of little importance to readers has been telegraphed at great expense to all portions of the Union. It has been the desire of newspaper publishers to improve telegraphic dispatches—to strip them of useless verbiage—sending nothing but what would interest the public.

We subscribe heartily to the plan of stripping the dispatches of the useless, senseless, uninteresting and vexatious "verbiage" which has so strongly marked them heretofore. If the new agent will send along all the items that are interesting to the public, stripped of the useless, etc., verbiage, instead of sending a thousand and one items that are of no interest to anybody, he will make himself immortal—and oblige, etc.

THE SUBDUED SOUTH.—The Richmond Examiner in alluding to the progress of the loyal Southerners through the Northern States, says:

We are afraid that the Apes will have to go back to the middle ages for a suggestion. In those days there were fanatic pilgrimages, in which certain holy relics were borne to attract and inspire all the devout along the journey. Wherefore not exhume the bones of THE KING APE, (Lincoln), (him who played such fantastic tricks before high heaven as made the angels weep) and parade them through the land.

All the devils that ever possessed human beings might be challenged and defied to utter a more atrocious and diabolical sentiment than this. No one after reading it would need to be told that the Examiner sustains Mr. Andrew Johnson.

AMERICAN SECURITIES IN EUROPE.—A London newspaper remarks that United States Five-Twenty bonds are bought with the greatest eagerness in Paris, London, Frankfort, and all the commercial cities of Europe. Until lately American securities have been in little favor; hence the present demand is significant of the belief which Europe has in the permanence of peace in our country. The late large shipments of gold from Europe to the United States have been made mainly for the purpose of purchasing American bonds. This shows that the chances of the renewal of civil war in this country are considered by European capitalists as in the highest degree remote.

We have in our possession a relic from the grave of the great Johnson party. It was franked to us by Senator Reverdy Johnson, and consists of a large pamphlet, on the first page of which are the words, "The Proceedings of the National Union Convention, held at Philadelphia, August 14th, 1866." It is odorous of the tomb from which it was ravished, and out of respect for things departed, we immediately put it out of sight. It is probably the very last memento that will ever be seen of that happy arm-in-arm performance at Philadelphia. In the fitness of things it ought to be buried in a dunghill.

The editor of the Richmond Whig, in a tone which indicates gushing affection for the loyal men who whipped the smutty devils of secession out of such as he, calls the offences of theft and horse-stealing, "Butlerizing" and "Sheridanising." The President ought to conciliate him with a postoffice. Otherwise, the fellow may yet apply the latter ingeniously-contrived word to the President's act of stealing out a portion of Sheridan's dispatches and publishing the rest as if it were the dispatch entire.

It is a noticeable fact that though the Union majority in the city of Philadelphia was above two thousand less in October than it was two years ago, yet the Union majority in the whole State of Pennsylvania was diminished only three thousand. The patronage of the Federal Government was used with unscrupulous desperation to carry the State against Geary, and this patronage was concentrated mainly at Philadelphia. The result was the reduction of the Union majority by more than five thousand votes, which was partially balanced by Union gains in the country.

THE RECENT ELECTIONS AND THE SOUTH.—The Richmond (Va.) Examiner having received the returns of the recent elections, thus descants upon the pleasures of so doing:

The business of sitting up to a late hour in order to receive unsatisfactory telegrams is not pleasant. This is what we did last night. At the time of going to press the Associated Press and special dispatches received by us fully confirmed the anticipations of a radical triumph in Pennsylvania which we expressed in yesterday's Examiner. Truly may we say: "Blessed are those who expect nothing, for they shall not be disappointed."

GREAT WORK.—On the 20th of October, at the Seabeck saw mill on Puget Sound, one circular saw cut one hundred and sixty-eight average sized pine logs into inch and a quarter boards. On the following day at the same mill one saw and edger cut three hundred and twenty-eight fir logs, (average length 28 feet) into square timber, the side boards and plank also edged. This is work which it would not be easy to beat.

Whenever Johnson wants to do an unwarrantable act, he asks his Attorney General whether he has power in the premises, and the Attorney General never fails to render him an affirmative answer. This is not a new device. It was in this fashion that James the Second of England made innovations on the Constitution and dispensed with the laws of his kingdom. But it finally cost him his throne.

What is the Johnson policy of reconstruction? It thus cogently stated in the Cincinnati Gazette: "Any State (Ohio for example) may walk out of Congress, stay out as long as she pleases, smash up all the laws of the nation in her territory, adopt a new flag, elect her own President, send her ambassadors to foreign nations, and yet all this while retain her political rights in the nation she has abjured.

At Newark, Ohio, the President said that "unless the course of Congress was arrested by the suffrages of the people, it would lead to a civil war; that it would not be a war between the North and the South, but an internecine war." We have not heard of his threatening civil war since the elections were held. Probably he is anxious to hold on for the remainder of his term, and so thinks it well to maintain silence.

So far as the telegraph has informed us, not a Copperhead Committee has been received at the White House for three weeks, and not a speech has been made by its occupant during all that time. Are not the people in danger of forgetting that he is a "humble individual," and that he has filled every office in the gift of the people from Alderman up?

"Who has sacrificed more than I," inquires the President. Comparing the position he held eighteen months ago with the position he holds now, we could answer with all truth, Nobody.

USE NAWELL'S PULMONARY SYRUP if your throat or lungs are at all affected. Delays are dangerous.

GET THE BEST.—ELLSWORTH & CARDWELL, 89 First Street, furnish the very best PHOTOGRAPHS, SUN PEARLS and every other kind of PICTURE know to the art. It is believed that the ancient Druids understood something of fine arts, but it has remained for this establishment to show its real beauties, in fixing the features of the human face. It is not necessary to wait for a clear day.

LIFE INSURANCE.—Within the last few weeks a large number of our citizens have availed themselves of the benefit of a Life Insurance, which certainly is very praiseworthy, but one of those heavy BEAVER SUITS, for sale at the ST. LOUIS CLOTHING STORE, will pardon Life and do away with the necessity of a Life Policy.

DON JUAN LODGE.—Messrs A H Sanderson and A Bowers called at our office yester lay will specimens of the gold taken from the Doo Jun Lodge, Washington District Warren Diggings The rock taken from this ledge has averaged upwards of $10 000 per ton. The specimens of gold we saw weighed 15 ozs Is 619 fine and is worth $13 50 per ounce. These result men genius as that near Powers, if we will open a road to the district They will send down amounts of gold and silver that will throw into the shade anything done by Nevada or Owyhee Messrs Sanderson and Bennie are taking about 80 pounds of the rock to Mr Hurst, an assayer of San Francisco for the purpose of testing it in the most thorough manner Mr Hurst was one of the parties sold by the man Robinson in the Carson lake mining scheme last summer After that bubble burst, Mr Hurst was induced to visit this district. He has spent the summer there and is now permanently interested This rock he himself selected and the results will no doubt be interesting to all as indications of the value of the district Messrs Sanderson and Bennie are now on their way to New York and Chicago, intending to interest their friends in these cities in the development of the ledges of Northern Idaho Success to all enterprise tending to the development and unlocking of the treasure vaults of the North Untold wealth lies hidden deep down in those veins a reward for energy and enterprise

MORE IN CATHAYON —A great row and free fight occurred at a Chinese gambling house situated on Alder street between First and Second at 2 o clock P M yesterday It appears that this house is a gambling hell for the Celestials—wants of the city and that at the time mentioned a large crowd of Chinamen were in the house and engaged in the game. A Celestial had lost $200, and was furious and violent about it He drew a knife and was about to make an attempt to re-obtain his money by force All the Chinamen in the house took sides in the matter and the prospects for a free fight seemed flattering At this juncture some of the Chinese went and called the police saying "One man kills me takee meche my money On the arrival of the police the crowd fled in all directions The police succeeded in arresting three that were pointed out as having been engaged in the row These arrested were searched and found to be armed with pistols and knives They were lodged in the city jail and will be examined this morning These Chinese cases are especially interesting and instructive A court may ex amine Chinese witnesses and hear Chinese testimony for any given length of time and at the end it will have affirmed an incredibly small amount of information

Ladd & Tilton	80 000
Order & Bro	13 000
Others	50 000
Total	$343,0 00

NEW HAT STORE.—We would call the attention of the public to the fact that J H Daly & Co. are now opening a new and fine stock of hats, caps and military goods. Go and see them at No. 108 Front street, Starr's new building. Mr Daly is well known in the city, having for a long time been engaged with Butler & Bro. at the Pioneer Hat Store We wish the new establishment success

WIND DOWN.—The high winds of the last two or three days have played merry havoc with tree tops and carelessly fastened limbs along the route of the telegraph and as a result, the constant answer to "Any news" is "blow down." When the "zephyrs" get through with their frolic, the line will probably resume its work

STEAMER.—The steamship Orizaba, of the C. O and M. S. S. Co's line, Francis Connor commander, will sail for San Francisco direct at 9 o clock this morning. She will take a very large number of passengers and a good freight. She was advertised for 7 o clock but the time of ... was changed until 9 o clock

What Experienced Mill Men think of the Portable Steam Saw Mills built by the Oregon Iron Works!

PORTLAND Oct 15th, 1866.

To THE OREGON IRON WORKS:

Gentlemen.—The Portable Steam Saw Mill which we purchased of you last spring for Ben d Orellie Lake has been in operation during the past season, and has more than met our expectations in its performance With three men, we turn out from three to four thousand feet, and with five men, five thousand feet per day of ten hours; and we take pleasure in recommending these mills as the most SUBSTANTIAL, DESIRABLE AND PERFECT MILLS IN USE, and especially adapted to the wants of this country, on account of their compact form ease of transportation and the facility with which they can be set up and put in operation. Although subjected to the most severe tests, no repairs have been required

"Mama, I'm Dying!"

THE DYING WORDS OF OUR LITTLE SON

[Died in Portland, on the morning of the 27th September 1866 of diphtheria, Harvey Theodore Allen son of A. L. and Jennie W. Tozier aged 5 years and 3 days.]

The sun had sunk behind the hills,
The dusky shades of night
Was curtaining the window panes
And shutting out the twilight
The bustle of the outside world
Was drawing to a close
The daily toiler sought his home
For rest and sweet repose
The tired boys had left their plays,
Weary with noisy mirth,
The stillness of an evening's calm
Rested upon the earth

But note us that watched around
The couch of our sick boy,
Eve's quiet brought no happiness,
No rest, no hope, no joy
Anxiously gathered by the bed
Of our poor suffering one,
Night brought but sadness to our hearts,
Sorrow for our dear son
From couch to couch, at his request,
We changed him oft and o'er,
Or with him in our weary arms,
We paced again the floor,
But nursing and remedials
And change were all in vain,
Naught gave our poor dear boy ease,
Or a respite from pain

Painter and weaker grew his voice,
More labored came his breath,
And on his little brow was set
The signet seal of death,
As on his mother's lap he lay,
Her arm beneath his head,
Gazing upon her tearful eyes,
With quivering lip he said
"Mamma, I'm dying Kiss your boy
And hug me to your breast,
I cannot stay with you and pa,
I'm going home to rest,
To Effie's home—my angel sister's home—
And you will come there, too,
After awhile, and dear papa,
And see me there, won't you?

"O, let me hug and kiss you both,
Mama, please raise my head
And kiss me as you used to, when
At night I went to bed,
And let me feel your face, mamma
And run my fingers through,
And twine them in your hair, mamma,
As once I used to do,
When I was all the one you had,
Your time and love to claim,
When I was called your own sweet boy,
Ere sister Ettie came.

"You love me yet, you love your boy,
Mama? I know you do,
You love me and sweet sister, both,
And so does papa, too,
But soon you'll have but her to love,
For I am going away,
I cannot help it dear mama,
I cannot with you stay,
Mama, I'm dying, dying now,
As once I said before,
What will you do without your boy,
When "Dear, is no more?

"Let sister Kittie have my toys,
My kittens give away,
All but the one I call Willie,
Keep it, mama, for me,
In memory of your little boy,
Whom you will see no more,
Rolling his balls and playthings with
The kittens round the floor"

Thus lowly whispered our sick boy,
Our dear, beloved one,
Our little Harvey Theodore,
Our poor, dear, dying son,
Pillowed upon his mother's lap,
Gasping for every breath,
The cold death sweat upon his brow,
One hour before his death.

And then he took each by the hand
And bid us all "good-bye,"
His little hands were then raised up
And pointed to the sky,
As though he reached for something there,
Some one whom he espied,
Then sank upon his pillow and
Unmurmuringly died.

A Six Months' Trip to Europe—What can be seen, and what it costs.

J. Ross Browne delivered a lecture in San Francisco, on Friday evening, of which the Bulletin gives the following synopsis:

"Mr. Browne commenced by saying that he proposed telling the audience, in a familiar way, what could be seen in the course of a six months' trip to Europe. People could not see with the same eyes any more than they could hear with the same ears, eat with the same mouths, or smell with the same noses; still there are some general features in European life which differ essentially from what we are accustomed to in the new world, that it would be strange, indeed, if we could not find in them much to interest us all, however varied might be our tastes, or dissimilar our way of seeing the world, and the impressions the various objects of nature and art produce upon us.

His own experiences in Europe covered so extensive and varied a field of observation, ranging back through many years of his life, and over many thousand miles of travel, that to present anything like a detailed narrative of them would occupy, as nearly as he could calculate, about six months. If the audience would like to keep their seats that length of time, he would be happy to tell them all he knew, and more, if they wished it; but he thought they had all better join the Veteran Corps before starting upon such a sedentary expedition as that.

It had occurred to him in looking over the wild rubbish of notes which had accumulated upon his hands, that some practical idea of the expenses of a short trip to Europe, the mode of living there and the best way of seeing the most prominent objects of interest in a limited time, would be as acceptable as anything he could offer, in view of the approaching exposition at Paris, which would doubtless attract crowds of visitors from California as well as from other parts of the United States.

The facilities for traveling in Europe, Mr Browne said, have increased with wonderful rapidity during the last fifteen years. A trip that required months in former days, can now be performed in weeks. The expenses of living have doubled, and in many instances quadrupled, yet, if we look at the vast network of railways that now exists, the extent of country that can be traversed and the number of places that can be seen within a given time, it really costs less at the present time to make a tour of Europe than it did years ago.

It is no uncommon thing at this day to land upon the continent with no more baggage than you can carry in your hand, and visit the principal cities of France, Italy, Switzerland, the Southern and Middle States of Germany, Austria, Hungary, Poland, Prussia proper, the European part of Russia, England, Sweden, Norway and Denmark, within the limits of a six months' tour.

This is "doing" Europe in something of a hurry, it must be admitted, but Americans generally love by steam, and like to go through the world by steam. If they do blow up now and then, it is very certain they see all that is going while they are under way—more, he thought, than any people on the face of the earth. An important fact was impressed on his mind by actual experience—that it does not require any length of time to get the salient features of a country or a people.

Take as an illustration, a visit of three days to some remarkable or characteristic city—Paris Vienna or Berlin. A person of ordinary intelligence, who makes good use of his time, learns more, has a more vivid impression of the peculiarities of such a city and its inhabitants, than could be gained by a lifetime of reading. Nay, strange as it may appear, he has acquired a larger amount of knowledge in the brief space of three days than he can possibly acquire by a subsequent residence of three years.

All the senses are called into requisition. The great combination of impressions is made while the novelty lasts, what is afterwards acquired only amounts to greater detail and perhaps increased accuracy. The longer the experience lasts, the less attention is directed to those marked peculiarities which at first possesses so strong an interest. It becomes an every day matter. The turbans and flowing costumes of the Turks in Constantinople afford no more wonder to the eye of an American traveler, after a few days, than the long tails and blue cotton shirts of the Chinese in Sacramento or Pike streets to a citizen of San Francisco.

Now, to give practical application to his remarks, he would suppose that a family living in San Francisco or the city of Oakland, (the axle around which civilization revolves) desires to visit the great Exposition at Paris.

He said a family because he considered that no man had a right to go on a pleasure trip of that kind without taking his wife and no good wife would want to leave her children.

No man has any business with a wife unless he can take her with him. The expense is a mere pretext, for it will cost him less with the good counsel and economy of a true friend and loving companion, as every wife is, to fortunate enough to possess a good husband, than if he traveled alone. He had no faith in men who leave their families at home and range about the continent of Europe.

Taking it for granted then, that the family must go, and supposing it to consist of half a dozen, all told the first question for consideration was the mode of departure.

The proper season to leave this side, in order to have a pleasant passage all the way through would be about the 1st of April. You land in New York about the 1st of May. The Southampton or Havre in the 1st of May. The trip across the Atlantic in the Bremen or Hamburg line of steamers which he recommended for comfort convenience and economy occupies twelve days to Southampton, or thirteen or fourteen days to the Continent of Europe.

The cost of passage will be about $220 per adult to New York and $112 from New York to Havre, a few dollars more to Paris, making $332. Incidental expenses need not exceed $65, so that $400 would cover the actual necessary cost of the trip. Now if we quadruple this, supposing the family to rate as four adults, we land $1 600 as the actual passage money. The return trip would be about the same, making $3,200 in the aggregate, or $800 each.

To estimate the cost while in Europe would be exceedingly difficult. This must depend mainly upon the habits of economy exercised by the party, the duration of the sojourn, and the extent of their travels.

In respect to traveling expenses, railway fare in France is much higher than in Germany and the northern parts of Europe. The rate for second class is about two cents a mile, first-class cents.

In Germany railway travel is both cheap and comfortable. Third class cars average little over a cent per mile, second class, in which most people travel, except 'Princes, fools and Americans,' 1½ cents, first class, two cents. Hotel expenses over the Continent may be rated at about $2 50 a day.

A foot tour through Germany may be made at a cost of about sixty cents a day. Bayard Taylor made the famous pedestrian tour at an average expense of fifteen or twenty cents, but this was many years ago.

From the data thus given some general idea of the cost of a tour may be formed.

This principle may be laid down. If you stop any great length of time at one place, and adapt yourself to the habits of the people, you can live at about half what it costs in the United States. If you travel much over the public thoroughfares and travel rapidly, you are naturally fleeced, and your expenses are nearly, if not quite as much, as they would average at least five dollars a day for each adult.

Letter from John F Potter

John F. Potter, formerly a member of Congress from Wisconsin, resigned his position as Consul General at Montreal, in the following letter

U. S. CONSULATE GENERAL, B. N. A. P.
MONTREAL Sep 20, 1866

To the President of the United States

SIR—But a little more than two years ago your illustrious and honored predecessor the lamented Lincoln, contrary upon me, without solicitation, the position of Consul General for the British North American Provinces which I have held up to the present time. When I came here the fearful conflict of arms from which our nation has but recently emerged was still in progress, and I found a very large party in these Provinces led on by rebel emissaries from the South, and encouraged by the political organs of the Canadian Government, animated by a bitter hostility to the Government of the United States, and loud in the expression of their desire that the Union of the States should be severed, and our national power forever destroyed. Their sympathy with rebels in arms against us was warm and outspoken. They had with them in active co-operation, the Provincial Judges and the Courts over which they presided, with a very few honorable exceptions. The press in the interest of the Administration was daily filled with the most bitter and violent denunciations of our Government, and with the vilest personal abuse of its then honored chief. After his assassination, and on your accession to the Presidency, this murderous abuse was transferred to yourself, and became especially violent and unsparing after your enunciation of those patriotic sentiments relative to the instigators of bloodshed and strife which had deluged our fair land with the best blood of the nation, in which you declared that the men who gave the influence and means to destroy the Government should not participate in the great work of reorganization, that those who brought this misery upon the State should not be permitted to control its destinies, that if this were allowed, then all the precious blood of our brave soldiers and officers will have been wantonly spilled, all the glorious victories won by our noble armies go for naught, and all the battle-fields which have been sown with dead heroes during the rebellion will have been made memorable in vain. As a proof of the intensity of this feeling, I would respectfully refer you to the vile charges publicly made in the newspapers of this city, over the signatures of two of the leading men of the rebellion then resident here, against yourself as having instigated the assassination of President Lincoln. As soon, however, as you had indicated a radical change in your policy toward the rebels, a change almost as great and astounding was apparent here among those to whom I have alluded. Those men who continued to vilify, slander and abuse Mr Lincoln up to the time of his assassination, including rebel emissaries from the South who came here to execute murderous raids upon the peaceful citizens of the United States, are now your warmest admirers, defenders and friends.

Even the notorious Dr Blackburn, who attempted to spread yellow fever and other infectious diseases among the patriotic soldiers of our army, and who sought to compass the death of President Lincoln by the same fiendish means, has recently given in his adhesion to your policy and announced himself as your friend. Your recent violent denunciations of the Congress of the United States, a co-ordinate branch of the Government of which you are the Chief Executive, as traitors and enemies to the Union—in speeches made during your recent progress through the country—has imparted new life and renewed vigor to all those adherents of the Southern rebels now domiciled in these Provinces, and are most heartily applauded by every hater of republican institutions resident upon British soil. Under such circumstances, and believing that your policy will inevitably lead to disaster, in the restoration of guilty men to even more than their former power in the administration of the Government, my position has become most mortifying and intolerable to me, and, as I cannot possibly defend your course against the daily censures of the few good men here, who were true to our Government through all its past dangers and perils, I would esteem it a great favor to be relieved from my present position at your earliest convenience.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,
JOHN F POTTER

TWO GIRLS RESCUED FROM THE INDIANS.—In a letter from Fort Dodge, Kansas, September 29th, we find the following:

We have just succeeded in getting two white girls from the Indians. They had captured them in Texas and had them with them nearly thirty three days. You could not imagine the amount of hardship those poor girls have gone through. It is perfectly horrible. The Indians still have the mother and other sister. They killed and scalped their father before the girls. The girls' names are Margaret and Maggie Josephine Box. They came from Montague county, Texas and have relatives living there. They were captured by the Indians about the 25th of August, on their way home from visiting some of their relatives. This is the story of one of them aged seventeen. "Six of the Indians took us prisoners—mother, baby, two sisters and myself. My mother and youngest sister are still in the hands of the Indians. After being captured they tied us to horses and made us keep along with them. We traveled as far as I can recollect, my mother fourteen days and I eleven. We were very thirsty, but when ever we asked for water they would whip us. The second day after I was captured I was treated wrongly by the Indians. I had to pack wood and water all the time and even the squaws would hit me. My little baby sister fell from the horses and was killed a few days after our being captured. There were only two of the Indians that was kind to us—Kicking Bird and Stumbling Bear. Stumbling Bear would not let any one hurt my little sister Maggie. If I could only get my mother—I know she is sick."

Some 22 Humlupais were killed lately by the Mohaves about 70 miles from Fort Mohave, and 14 women and children taken prisoners. The Mohaves were accompanied by 10 Americans. The Mohaves show themselves friendly to the whites, and even at the present time a party of about 30, accompanied by several Americans, are on the war path, and an Indian who returned from the party to Mohave on the 11th of October, reports that they have driven a large number of Pah Utes, Humlupais and Yavapais, beyond Prescott, and burned all their houses.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

WEEKLY REVIEW

PORTLAND, FRIDAY, 21 M[arch]
Nov 16 1866

In our city trade at present but little general merchandise is held firm and prices. A considerable amount of trade is still going to the city from our Northern counties and large stocks of goods are being sent to all the winter trade. The large number of mules constantly passing through the city en route for their mountain stations, that they may continue at the arrival of the steamers, that they may continue to our market as they must be of great benefit to the retail dealers. The emigrants are like all of the class of people in the mines—they wear canvas pants and shirts as long as they leave the mines they want the best cloth in the market and usually want it till they arrive at Portland before replenishing. They have the best to pay for their purchases at Portland rally. It may be a vexed question as to the effect of the continued upon the steamship running between this port and San Francisco but it cannot be denied that the low fare between Portland San Francisco has induced the miners to chose this route so far it has conferred a benefit. There is no doubt that had the fare through to the Columbia on the stages been lessened and that fare down the Columbia been reduced, a much larger number would have chosen this route in preference to any other. No better opportunity could have been for it than the present to have at once secured the travel. While the steamers are carrying passengers at such extreme low rates had the northern steamship line reduced the fare and a lower rate down the Columbia river been charged it would have constituted so great a difference in the cost of the trip that by far the greater portion of the travel would have chosen this route in preference to any other.

We note no change in the price of wheat since our last issue. We have established but little wheat in the San Francisco market. McCraken, Merrill & Co. say that thus far during the month constant activity has been everywhere observable. Receipts of grain continue to be largely in excess of any former period of our history. The demand for our breadstuff has been increasing ever since harvest. Exporters thus far have been able for the most part to execute promptly all their orders for grain to the full capacity of available tonnage. And to the credit of our producers be it said they have at all times been ready and willing to meet buyers promptly, to follow the market to be content with prices that exporters felt able to pay. Thus giving pecuniary relief to the community, and enabling farmers to obtain a proportionable advance for their surplus wheat yet remaining. Our warehouses are yet filled to repletion with Flour and Wheat. The daily arrivals thus far have been more than sufficient for the shipping requirement. So much so that it is at this moment quite difficult to procure suitable storage for Grain either in this city or at other localities around the Bay. In a previous issue we placed the quantity thus in store at 2,500,000 sacks. It is all of that now, and perhaps more.

In the San Francisco market Wheat is now worth $2 10 per 100 lbs, for choice samples. The sales for ten days past have been very considerable chiefly for exportation to New York and Great Britain. At present the greatest demand is from Atlantic ports—a second cargo having been secured for Philadelphia, while divers other ships have loaded and are now under charter for New York. Flour has also advanced proportionately with Wheat.

It is not at all probable that the demand for shipment to New York via the Isthmus will continue as the present advanced price has already reduced the price very low. The grain is conveyed to New York by what is called the "slow line." The freight charged thereupon is said to be about $1 68 per 100 lbs—gold to be prepaid. For parcels of 200 or 500 tons Wells Fargo & Co. have informed us they would carry the same at $1 50, gold. This price seems to be absolutely yet exorbitant when compared with the freight charged per ship via Cape Horn. The latter is conveyed hence in first class ship per ships at $18 per ton currently—possibly $16 thus making a material difference in the cost of wheat when laid down in New York. We call of ourselves see the best to be derived by hurrying the same to market at this great increase to its cost. It is at best but an experiment. Its present cost is $2 per 100 lbs, freight $1 68—it is aggregating $3 68 ₱ 100 lbs gold without calculating insurance wastage etc. Recent telegraphic dispatches from the Atlantic gave us the price of best White Wheat at $3 25 per bushel, currency say $3 45 ₱ 100 lbs. It would cost $2 65 in gold—the rate being 148—laid down in New York, exclusive of all expenses other than freight.

In regard to other articles of Oregon produce, the San Francisco reports say:

Oregon is now sending us liberal supplies of Flour and Wheat. The Orithamne on her last trip down had 4 280 qr sks Flour and 222 sks Wheat. The freight charged is now, we believe, $3 per ton; as against $7@10 in previous years. At this low price for transportation Oregonians will without doubt, be free to accept of present rates for their large surplus of Wheat. (They have two full crops now in their granaries.) We are also beginning to receive Apples and other fruit from the North—all selling at low prices. Recently the receipts for Bacon and Hams have been free from Oregon, but during the week one entire invoice of 178 sks Bacon Sides was promptly reshipped to Portland by same steamer that brought it, the market rate in Oregon being fully two cents per pound more than was obtained here.

The Oregon Apples at hand per Orithamne say 400 boxes, sold from the wharf at $1 25 per box.

The Flour and Wheat from Oregon by steamer was promptly sold upon arrival at full figures, and at prices that must leave a fine margin to the shippers.
